

Paul Posluszny Heads to Iraq

January 28, 2008 by Allison Boyer

Filed under Football

I just had to comment on this story because Paul Pozluszny was my favorite player at Penn State. An impressive linebacker that did well in the draft, Posluszny (now at Buffalo) won't be heading to the Super Bowl like so many other non-playing players will on February 3. No, instead, he's going to watch it with some of the most important people in all of our lives – troops stationed overseas in Iraq.

Early this morning, Posluszny and a number of other NFL players left for a 10-day tour of military bases in the Middle East. They are going to sign autographs, hold meet and greets, and even watch the game with a group of military personnel.

Will he be well-known among football fans in Iraq? Maybe, if they followed his career in college. However, Puz hasn't had the change to gain recognition in the NFL yet. He was injured in Week Three in a game against the New England Patriots and had to sit out for the rest of the season.

It is nice to see athletes giving back a bit. I know not everyone makes millions of dollars in the NFL, but these players are giving something even more important – their time. Kudos, guys.

<http://www.everyjoe.com/articles/paul-posluszny-heads-to-iraq-144/>